SCHLESINGER NAMED TO BOARD OF FELLOWS

Dr. Hilde Schlesinger, director of Mental Health Services for the Deaf at Langley Porter Insititute, University of California, has been appointed to the College Board of Fellows. Following her graduation from the University of Louisville Medical School in 1953, Dr. Schlesinger served for a number of years in the United States Public Health Service.

One of the few psychiatrists in the United States who has a knowledge of American Sign Language, she has done extensive psychiatric work with the deaf. Dr. Schlesinger is keenly interested in the effect of the early child-parent interaction on language development.

In addition to her duties at the Langley Porter Institute, Dr. Schlesinger is involved in services and education for the deaf as consultant for the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation, State of California; California School for the Deaf, Berkeley; and the San Francisco Speech and Hearing Center. She is also consultant to the National Advisory Committee on Education of the Deaf, HEW, and a member of the editorial boards for the American Annals of the Deaf and the Journal of Rehabilitation of the Deaf.

ACUPUNCTURE...DOES IT WORK?

The Department of Audiology and Speech is gathering information regarding the effect of acupuncture in improving a hearing loss. Kevin Swarts, a graduate student, is working with the Department in collecting data from Gallaudet students who have undergone acupuncture.

Students are asked to fill out a questionnaire regarding the number of treatments they have had and if they have experienced any results. Each student is then asked to visit the Clinic for a post-treatment hearing test.

There are several acupuncture treatment centers in Washington, and a number of hearing impaired adults and children have undergone treatments. To date, there is no conclusive evidence to indicate that acupuncture produces any positive changes in one's hearing loss.
